KEY.

In spelling Seneca, it is intended to give only one sound to each letter, and to denote each sound uniformly by the same letter. Hence the spelling is all done by the ear, and must of necessity be uniform, if the pronunciation is uniform. Some words are spoken differently by different persons, and of course will be so spelled as to denote the difference by those who write from their pronunciation. This will explain any want of uniformity in the mode of spelling which may be noticed in this work. We have written the words as they have been pronounced by our interpreters, and it is hoped they will be so pronounced, in reading, as to retain precisely each interpreter's mode of pronunciation. We always use the letters as in the following table.

a	is sounded as in the English word	fall.
ă	"	" hat.
e	"	" they.
ě	"	" bet.
i	"	" machine.
ĩ	"	" hit.
o	"	" note.

ò denotes a compressed sound half way between 'o' in 'note' and 'o' in 'move.'

u is sounded as in the English word push.

v like 'u' in the English word but.

A mark like a hyphen (-) placed underneath a letter gives it a nasal sound, similar to that which 'n' takes before 'g' and 'k' in English.

ai meeting in one syllable should be sounded like 'i' in 'pine.'

iu in similar circumstances, like 'u' in 'pure.'

ch always soft, as in 'chin.'

h like the 'h' in the English 'Oh!' when rapidly repeated, as a prohibitory interjection.

h after 't' and 's' is never sounded as in English, but retains its own distinct sound without coalescing with the letter 's' or 't.'

Silent letters are never used in writing Seneca. Vowel sounds are sometimes repeated, so as in rapid pronunciation to constitute little more than a lengthening of the sound of the first vowel, and therefore never separated in the division of words into syllables.

The larger spaces divide the words, and the smaller the syllables, and, in singing, all the letters which are set together without any space between them should be spoken as one syllable.

The accents, (') whether placed over the letter, or at the end of the syllable, denote the percussive force of the voice which belongs to the accented syllable in English pronunciation.—In some instances several are found in one word, and where one of them is much stronger than the others, it is sometimes denoted by a much heavier type, (') as in the word "Oh-ne'gah dăn'dyo gwah," in the 4th line of the 30th hymn, where the force of the large accent should be double that of the other.

 It is not ten minutes labor for any white person of tolerable intelligence to learn the sounds of the letters in Seneca, so far, at least, as not to disturb the devotions of the Indians by barbarous mispronunciations; and such as will not devote that time to the subject should refrain from singing, as a matter of conscience; that they may not introduce confusion into the solemn services of the sanctuary.

PREFACE.

In preparing this edition of the Seneca Hymn Book, an effort has been made, to improve, as far as possible, the hymns before published, and to add new ones, embracing a wider range of subjects, so as to secure a good degree of adaptation to all the various requirements of this branch of Divine service. The large number of hymns in our best English collections admits of greatly diversified forms of expression for truth and emotion substantially the same. This, of course, with our small number of hymns, could not be expected to be attained in Seneca. Still it is believed that the book now contains something appropriate, in a greater or less degree, for every occasion, and for every theme in reference to which a selection may be required.

The object of singing in either private or public worship, is doubtless to excite holy emotions, and furnish an appropriate medium for their expression. All genuine Christian emotion has its origin in divine truth. There can be no such thing as intelligent praise, prayer, thanksgiving, penitence, confession, &c, unless the truth to which all these things stand related, is distinctly appreciated. Hence the hymns of Scripture, our only divinely inspired model, are replete with didactic instruction. They present the truth, and then give utterance to the corresponding emotion; or, perhaps more frequently, utter the truth in the language of emotion, as if expecting that, in every pious mind, the recognition of the truth would so instantly excite the correspondent emotion, that the mind would prefer its simultaneous expression. An effort has been made to introduce into this book all the leading truths of the Christian system; and, as far as practicable, with accompanying expressions of the corresponding Christian emotion, with the hope of adding a new interest to the services of the Indian congregations.

Much, however must depend upon the judiciousness of the selection. This is true every where. The most intelligent and devout among enlightened Christians find the interest of public worship greatly enhanced by the selection of appropriate hymns. How indispensable, then, must such a selection be in circumstances like those of most, if not all of our Indian congregations.

Heretofore this has been difficult on account of the small number of hymns, and the limited amount of truth contained in them. It was discouraging to make an effort at appropriateness of adaptation. Now, however, with due care and pains, this object may be secured in almost every instance; especially if the choirs are prepared to sing all the various metres. No metres have been inserted which are not contained in tune books known to have been in use among the Indians. If therefore they have preserved their books, they can easily refresh their memories in respect to any tune they may have forgotten. Preparation for the sanctuary service in every department, should be esteemed a sacred duty. Without it, neither preaching, hearing, praying, nor singing can be performed aright. Its importance surely is not least in regard to the hymns which modify, for good or evil, as they necessarily must, the effect of all the other services.— Let the singers be always ready for every metre which the book contains; and then let the conductor of the services feel under conscientious obligations to ascertain and select what is best adapted to produce the needed effect on the congregation; and, with the divine blessing, it will not be too much to expect that new life will diffuse itself through all the services of the sanctuary.

For those not acquainted with the language, facilities as good as practicable, under the circumstances, have been provided. A table of the first lines of English hymns has been given, embracing not only those which have been somewhat literally translated, but also all where so much resemblance has been retained, that the knowledge of the English would suggest the general subject of the Indian hymn. This is followed by a list of texts on which hymns are founded, or to which they contain distinct allusion; and then there is a general index of subjects designed to indicate every important topic contained in the book, whether constituting the general subject of the hymns; or, as, perhaps, in the majority of instances, merely alluded to in a single stanza. In using this latter table, much advantage may be gained by ascertaining under how many topics the same hymn is referred to. In this way the scope of the hymn may be often learned as accurately, almost, as by a good translation; and a list of these topics pencilled in the margin will greatly facilitate future decisions as to its adaptedness to produce any particular effect which may seem desirable. By the careful use of these tables, it is believed that good selections will be generally practicable; although nothing can fully supply the place of such a knowledge of the language, as will enable one to appreciate the full force of every expression which the hymn contains. An English translation on opposite pages would have added greatly to the expense of the work ; but a few copies for those who conduct the Sabbath services will be interleaved with writing paper, on which each can note for himself the matter of every hymn, after having studied it with a competent interpreter, as he must necessarily do, in order to read it himself, or to have his interpreter read it intelligibly to the congregation. By pursuing this course, he may become in a short time so familiar with the book, as to make his selections as readily as if it were in his own native tongue.

The basis of this edition is that of 1842, the order of which is followed throughout, except that several hymns of a character adapted to special occasions have been transferred to the close, and have been replaced by others appropriate for Sabbath services. One, only, has been omitted. Thirty-nine which had been printed in tracts and pamphlets since 1842, have been inserted, and fifty three new ones have been written expressly for this work. Some of the old hymns have been materially changed in the revision. Where either the language could be improved, or a new truth in keeping with the character of the hymn inserted, it has been attempted, without any regard to the original authorship. Still there is room for much greater improvement, especially in the language.

The extreme length of Seneca words renders it exceedingly difficult to arrange them metrically, in lines at all capable of being set to our ordinary church music. By dint of much clipping, and the omission of all subsidiary ideas, the bare skeleton of an English hymn can be expressed in Seneca.—The best interpreters find it exceedingly difficult to convey the idea clearly in any form which shall not seem to the Indians a barbarous murdering of their language, not to speak of the unreasonable length to which a full translation would extend itself. The tune, like Procrustes' bedstead, requires the short words to be stretched, and the long ones to be excised, till, mutilated though they be, their length is equivalent to its own ; and the composer must deem himself happy, if enough of life and form remains to establish the personal identity, and enable the reader to comprehend his meaning.

This fact should be thoroughly explained to all the congregations, that they may understand why the language of the hymns differs so materially from that of common life. Having no poetic language of their own, they, of course, attribute every departure from common usage to a want of acquaintance with their language ; whereas it arises wholly from the impracticable length and measure of their words, in connexion with the inflexible demands of the tunes in which they are to be sung.

There is, however, little room for doubt, that one whose soul had felt the inspiration of poetry, and who had all the resources of the language at command, with a thorough understanding of all its principles of accent, quantity, cadence and euphony, would be able to furnish hymns of great beauty and expressiveness, in almost every variety of measure in use in other languages. This point has not been overlooked entirely, in the preparation of this edition ; and some advance, it is hoped, will be perceptible, especially in such of the hymns as are now, for the first time, published ; but the great object, after all, has been to convey truth, and to excite Christian emotion, while the poetry of language has been a minor consideration. When these preliminary labors shall have prepared the way, something more perfect will be demanded. It may be hoped that then, missionaries will be upon the ground with a far more perfect knowledge of the language ; and that, with the divine blessing upon their labors, Indian talent and acquaintance with the native tongue, may yet be consecrated to the work of promoting the spiritual welfare of the people ; and then it may be confidently expected that this desideratum will be supplied.

Containing, as it does, notwithstanding all its imperfections, much of the holy truth of his revelation, the work, like bread cast upon the waters, is commended to the care and blessing of God, with the hope that, after many days, its results will be manifest in the conversion of sinners, the increasing holiness and spiritual-mindedness of believers, and in the general advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom among this Indian people.

HYMN	PAGE
128 Alas, and did my Saviour bleed, - -	121
159 And let this feeble body fail, - -	152
52 And must I part with all I have? - -	54
104 Another six days work is done, - -	97
192 Another year Has told its fourfold tale, - -	194
85 A poor, wayfaring man of grief, - -	81
29 Awaked by Sinai's awful sound, -	33
55 Awake, my soul, to joyful lays, - -	56
177 Be days of drinking wine forgot -	175
17 Before Jehovah's awful throne, -	23
26 Behold the gloomy vale - - -	31
23 Behold the morning sun, - - -	28
63 Behold the potter and his clay, - -	63
125 Beyond where Cedron's waters flow, -	118
162 Beside the gospel pool, - - -	155
157 Blest be the tie that binds, (metre changed,)	150
136 Broad is the road that leads to death, -	129
97 Come, Holy Spirit heavenly Dove, -	92
73 Come, let us anew our journey pursue,	71
9 Come thou Almighty King (metre changed,)	16
49 Come, ye sinners, poor and needy, - -	52
144 Did Christ o'er sinners weep? (metre changed,) - - -	137
127 Friend after friend departs, - -	120
166 From all who dwell below the skies -	161
39 From Greenland's icy mountains, -	43
75 From the cross uplifted high, - - -	72
114 Gently Lord, O gently lead us, . -	107

HYMN	PAGE
43 Go, preach my gospel, saith the Lord, -	46
51 Great God attend while Zion sings, -	53
86 Guide me, O thou great Jehovah, - -	83
141 Hark ! a cry among the nations, -	133
83 Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound, -	79
32 Hark, my soul, it is the Lord, - -	36
22 He dies ! the Friend of sinners dies, -	27
40 How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,	44
10 How long, O Lord, shall I complain, -	17
48 How pleasant, how divinely fair, (metre changed,) - - - -	51
30 How still and peaceful is the grave, -	35
18 How sweet and awful is the place, -	23
69 If human kindness meets return, - -	68
106 I know that my Redeemer lives, - -	99
163 In life's early morn, (metre changed,) -	156
28 I saw one hanging on a tree, - - -	33
156 I would not live always, (metre changed,) -	149
151 Jesus, I come to thee, - - - -	144
168 Jesus, I my cross have taken, (metre chan- ged,) - - - -	162
41 Jesus, lover of my soul, - - - -	45
61 Jesus, who lives above the sky, - -	61
173 Just o'er the grave I hung, (metre changed,) -	167
92 Let Zion's watchmen all awake, - -	87
76 Look down, O Lord, with pitying eye, -	73
161 Lo ! on a narrow neck of land, (metre chan- ged,) - - - -	154
42 Lord, dismiss us with thy blessing, - -	46
56 Lord, in the morning thou shalt hear, -	57
187 My drink shall be the flowing fountain, -	180

HYMN	PAGE
68 Mercy, O thou Son of David, - -	67
62 My soul, come meditate the day, - -	62
25 My soul, repeat his praise, - - -	30
98 Not all the blood of beasts, (metre changed,) -	92
113 Now in the heat of youthful blood, -	107
15 Oh bless the Lord, my soul, - -	21
4 Oh bless the Lord, my soul, (metre changed) -	11
19 Oh for a closer walk with God, - -	24
152 Oh how happy are they who the Savior obey, -	145
71 O Praise ye the Lord, prepare your glad voice, -	69
129 Oh there will be mourning, (metre changed,) -	122
118 Oh turn ye, O turn ye, for why will ye die, -	111
123 Oh what is life? 'Tis but a flower, -	116
134 Oh where shall rest be found, - -	127
21 Once more, my soul, the rising day, -	26
158 People of the living God, - - -	151
64 Praise the Lord, ye saints adore him, -	64
36 Rise my soul and stretch thy wings, -	40
87 Salvation, O the Joyful sound, - -	83
100 Savior, visit thy plantation, - - -	94
171 Savior, visit thy plantation, - - -	165
131 Saw ye my Savior, - - -	124
121 Say, sinner, hath a voice within, - -	114
79 Shall we go on to sin, - - -	75
14 Show pity, Lord, O Lord forgive; - -	20
172 Stay, thou insulted Spirit, stay, - -	166
44-47 Stop, poor Sinner, stop and think, (metres changed,) - - -	47-50
139 Strait is the way, the door is strait, -	131
